ITEM 7

Yes, a city can allocate funds in its budget to provide mental health services for its employees, often through programs like Employee Assistance Programs (EAPs) which offer confidential counseling and support services; this is considered a valid use of public funds to promote employee well-being and workforce productivity.

Key points to consider:

- Legal framework:

Most jurisdictions allow local governments to include employee mental health services within their budget as part of overall employee benefits.

- Funding options:

Cities can use general fund revenue, grants from state or federal agencies focused on mental health, or dedicated funding from specific initiatives.

- Implementation methods:

- Contracting with a provider: Partnering with a mental health clinic or EAP provider to deliver services to employees.
- In-house services: Employing dedicated mental health professionals within the city government, depending on staffing needs.

- Benefits:

- Improved employee morale and productivity
- Reduced absenteeism and turnover
- Positive impact on public safety and service delivery
