ASSISTIVE DEVICES FOR YOUR HOME

The term, itself, seems to indicate something very high-tech, or exclusive to older adults or those with disabilities. -- Assistive technology.

It is true that there are many devices available to assist people as they age – think of canes, prosthetics, wheelchairs, stair lifts, automated pill dispensers and more. Yet, for every high-tech option, there are numerous simple options for everyday living at any age, including eyeglasses, non-skid plates and bowls, motion control lighting, phones with large buttons and others.

“Assistive technology sounds complicated, but really it’s not,” says K-State adult development and aging specialist Erin Martinez. “The typical definition is any tool or technology that helps a person complete daily tasks with ease and efficiency. It’s those things that make our lives easier throughout the day.”

For example, a step stool. You may be very capable in your physical mobility, but using a step stool to reach a higher shelf makes it easier and safer to reach the upper shelf. Also, a lever handle to replace a traditional doorknob is another low-cost option that can be “an excellent use of assistive technology.”

Other options for assistive devices in many parts of one’s life are as follows:

- In the kitchen – Grip foam handles for silverware, cutting boards that hold food in place, a drinking straw holder and more.
- Around the house – Programmable thermostats, robot vacuums, grab bars and handrails and more.
- Dressing and bathing – Buttoning aids and zipper pulls, long shoehorns, one-handed belts and more.
- Communication – Pens and pencils with special grips, talk-to-text devices, electronic screen readers and more.
- Cognition and memory – Audiobooks, identification bracelets, note-taking systems and more.
- At work or on the farm – Ergonomic workstations, anti-fatigue mats, swivel seating and more.

We (K-State Extension) have a lot of new assistive technology devices that you can try out, but you should also talk with your primary care physician and visit a home medical supply shop in your community. If you are interested in learning more, contact me (Bonnie Brewer, bjbrewer@ksu.edu) for a program about assistive technology. Other resources include a physical therapist or occupational therapist.

The goal of assistive technology is to keep people in their homes longer and help them maintain independence and mobility, and maintain their overall emotional well being and safety of being in their own home.

WHITEWATER, KANSAS — 2025 YEAR IN REVIEW —

2025 brought lightning bolts, library laughs, and plenty of small-town sparkle. We patched roads, nudged rates up a bit, and hosted festivals big cities would envy.

City Government & Infrastructure

New website launched, the water tower took a hit (it's fine!), and dropping AT&T saved us $1,000 a month.

Public Safety

Deputy Moore kept roads safe, Animal Control rehomed pets and wrangled chickens, dogs — and the occasional skunk.

Community Events

From Daddy-Daughter Dance to the Remington Festival, we celebrated well. Summer Reading drew 415 book-lovers.

Community Services

Food Pantry stayed strong, Moms in Touch lifted us up, and the library traded fines for food — carbs for kindness.

Local Business & Health

Cabin Pie fueled us, Cottonwood Pediatrics chased off flu season, Peak Family Wellness rebranded, and Main Street Blooms welcomed a new baby and a new logo.

From food-truck-friendly ordinances to a lightning-tested water tower, we had wins big and small — and a community that showed up, especially at the Budget Forum and Christmas Wishes.

The perfect Lamb of God

You are invited to come on a journey to experience the greatest story of all time! Discover how the Passover lamb of the Israelites in Egypt points to Christ, the Perfect Lamb of God, who came to earth at Christmas and now reigns forever and ever!
